

Earlier this year I wrote an article about The Changing Face of Retail which was designed as a thought piece for thinking about the Hamden retail and personal services economy over the next 20 years. What will become of our shopping areas as we have only known as retail, really since their beginning in the 1950's? Retail has changed and will continue to do so. The grocery market is also changing, first with the purchase of Whole Foods by Amazon. Now as predicted the rest of the players are getting into the game. Here is a recent article that begins to describe who is expanding into the grocery delivery market space.
